

Keynote Bernadette Holmes

In the world of AI and the global dominance of the English language why is plurilingualism so important? In this keynote, Bernardette Holmes will address the central value of language and cultural education across the lifespan.

There are multiple reasons why language and intercultural communication skills are essential to the personal, social and cultural development of individuals, nurturing harmonious, equitable and cohesive societies, and supporting stronger, fairer and more sustainable economies. She will make the case that languages and intercultural agility help to foster universal understanding and contribute to building a peaceful and harmonious world future
